SENATE BARS SMITH FROM SEAT

RUMORED GOVERNOR SMALL WILL RESIGN TO GET APPOINTMENT

Senate Establishes "Unwritten Law" In Illinois Case.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—A new "unwritten law," barring from the senate men elected through the expenditure of great campaign funds, was driving on the state books today as a result of the senate's action in excluding Frank L. Smith (R) of Illinois.

For the first time in its history, the senate denied a seat to a senator-elect holding legal credentials, on the ground that excessive campaign expenditures tainted his election with "fraud and corruption." In excluding Smith, the senate formally endorsed the "rule" laid down in the old Newberry case six years ago, that heavy campaign expenditures invalidated an election.

The vote ousting Smith was so overwhelming it surprised even his opposition. It was 61 to 23, with twenty-one Republicans, one Farmer-Laborite and thirty-nine Democrats voting against him, while but two Democrats and twenty-one Republicans voted for him. Illinois was left with but one senator as a result of the senate's action. Authorities here were agreed that the next move is up to Governor Len Small of Illinois, who can appoint a temporary successor to Smith pending a special election to fill the vacancy or simply permit the vacancy to exist until another congress convenes when Smith might try again to enter the senate.

The preponderance of opinion here was that Small would appoint a successor, due to the tremendous majority against seating Smith. The case against Senator-elect William S. Vare (R) of Pennsylvania, was practically settled by the Smith vote, according to leading opinion on both sides. The Vare case however was complicated by the contest filed against him by William B. Wilson, defeated Democrat. The senate probably will not decide the Wilson contest for months to come, although it may act on Vare's right to a seat within the near future.

Different committees have handled the two questions. The Reed slush fund committee, which forced Smith's exclusion, has handled the investigation of Vare's campaign expenditures. It probably will recommend his exclusion, as a result of the outcome of Smith's case. The senate committee on privileges and elections however is handling the Wilson-Vare contest and it probably will not have a report ready for months.

The resolution, which excluded Smith, first set forth in a preamble the results of the Reed committee's investigation. It charged Smith with spending $458,782 directly and indirectly to win the Republican nomination in Illinois in 1926. It set forth that $203,000 of this fund was contributed by the heads of public utilities while Smith served as chairman of the public utility commission. This action, it branded, as a "misdeed" under the Illinois law.

On the vote of exclusion, the Republican opposition to Smith included Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Capper, Couzens, Curtis, Dale, Frazier, Gooding, Howell, Johnson, Jones, LaFollette, McMaster, McNary, Norbeck, Morris, Nye, Robinson, and Stetson, and Willis.

The two Democrats voting for Smith were Blease and Steck. Senator Sackett, (R) of Ky., was paired against Smith while Senator King, (D) of Utah, was paired in favor of him.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Rumors circulated in Chicago and Springfield, Illinois, today that Governor Len Small contemplated resigning, and with succession to the governorship of Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling, would be appointed to fill the seat made vacant by the senate's action in excluding Frank L. Smith, Illinois senator-elect.

POISON MEDICINE KILLS FOUR

"Cough medicine," administered by a father who had suffered financial reverses, is believed by police to have caused the death of James Potter, his wife and two sons, James, Jr., and Robert, 14, at Cleveland, O. A chemist's analysis showed a powerful poison powder had been added to the liquid. Potter had come to Cleveland and had opened a rooming house after losing large sums of money in a real estate deal at Steubenville, O. FIVE MADE SERIOUSLY ILL BY FOOD AT SOCIETY INITIATION

Four Toledo Waite High Students And Instructor Overcome After Eating "Doctored" Oysters At Meeting.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 20.—Four students and an instructor of science at Waite High School here were seriously ill today following an initiation by the "Alchemists' Society" last night when the initiates were fed oysters which are believed to have been tainted.

Clarence Coontz, 38, the instructor, is reported critically ill at a hospital. Students who were made ill are Elizabeth Clause, 16, of Lackey, Ohio; Ruth Muench, 18; Alice Eggleston, 15; and James Zillich, 16, all of Toledo.

The organization, made up of science class students, held its initiation last night. Raw oysters were mixed with oil and other materials to give them an unpleasant taste. These were fed to the five initiates and all became violently ill soon afterwards.

Analysis of the materials with which the oysters were mixed show that they are non-poisonous, according to a report today, and it is believed that the oysters were tainted.

SOUTH OFFERS HULL AS ITS CANDIDATE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Rep. Cordell Hull of Tennessee, former Democratic national chairman, was presented to the nation today as the South's latest candidate for the presidency.

Hull was entered in the race by the unanimous endorsement of the Tennessee delegation in congress. He may make a formal announcement later.

Putting his forward as a "harmony candidate," the Tennessee delegation spokesmen emphatically denied that Hull was being proposed as a favorite son or a stalking horse to checkmate any candidate now in the field.

A veteran of nearly twenty years in congress, Hull achieved his party's chairman from 1921 to 1924.

AN APPEAL FOR HELP

Citizens interested in reports of suffering among children in sections of Ohio where labor disputes have brought about unemployment, are broadcasting a county-wide appeal for help for these unfortunates.

Committees interested in the relief work by Captain O. H. Cornwell, Company L, 147th Infantry, who has been delegated in charge of the relief operations here, believe it a humane duty to come to the relief of these children who are the innocent victims of the disputes of their elders.

Governor Donahay has issued a proclamation urging help from all Ohioans. Under direction of Captain Cornwell, an organization is operating to do Greene County's share in this relief campaign. Col. T. E. Andrews, of the O. S. and S. O. Home is in charge of county collections and Mayor John W. Prugh is in charge of the city collection.

A collecting committee will bring donations of clothing and food-stuffs to Captain Cornwell, who will ship the relief material to Columbus. A. E. Faulkner, as chairman of the financial committee, will receive cash donations at the Commercial and Savings Bank. Checks should be made payable to The Adjutant General of Ohio, Custodian of Children's Relief Fund.

Committee heads are urging a generous response from Xenia and Greene County citizens to alleviate the suffering.

PARENTS OF KILLER WILL ATTEND TRIAL OPENING NEXT WEEK

Hickmans May Testify For "Fox"—Other Witnesses Coming

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 20.—The father and mother of William Edward Hickman will be present when their son goes on trial for his life next Wednesday on a charge of kidnaping and murdering 12-year-old Marian Parker. This was virtually assured here today by well-grounded reports that Thomas Hickman, father of the youthful kidnaper-slayer, is on his way here from El Paso, Texas, and that Mrs. Eva Hickman, the mother, is accompanying Jerome Walsh, chief defense counsel, whose arrival from Kansas City is expected Saturday.

Whether the parents will take the stand during the trial and what, if any, their testimony would be was not divulged by Richard Cantillon, associate attorney in the defense of the "Fox." It is thought by followers of the case, however, that Hickman's attorneys may call upon the parents to testify in an effort to establish hereditary insanity.

Mr. and Mrs. Hickman have been separated for several years.

Several defense witnesses in addition to Mrs. Hickman are accompanying the young Kansas City attorney on his return trip to Los Angeles, according to word received by Cantillon. These are a physician of Tulsa, Okla., a Kansas City high school principal and a former police official of Kansas City.

Reports that defense counsel would ask for a deferral of the trial date were discounted by Cantillon.

HOTELLING IS ONLY PRISON NUMBER NOW

MARQUETTE, Mich., Jan. 20.—Today he is number 1438. A week ago he was Adolph Hotelling, respected citizen of Owosso, Mich., deacon of the Church of Christ, beloved husband and father.

He is beginning the second day of the life sentence imposed on him for the fiendish butchery of five-year-old Dorothy Schneider of Mt. Morris.

He cowers in his cell mumbling incoherently. He peers furtively at the passing wardens and shrinks in terror from the cold hate in the eyes of his fellow prisoners.

He arrived last night on the Michigan Central train at half past five Detroit time. During the trip he neither ate nor slept.

Mothers held aloft their children and pointed to the car window at which he sat. He had become a "bogeyman," this village carpenter who had never spoken harshly to his own little ones and to whom the children of his neighbors once had run with trusting smiles.

RELIEF ORGANIZED HERE FOR CHILDREN OF MINING REGIONS

Form Organization To Relieve Suffering Of Unemployed

An appeal for relief for suffering children of unemployed parents in certain sections of Ohio, a condition due to the industrial dispute in Ohio coal fields and other economic causes, was broadcast Friday by Captain Ozni H. Cornwell, of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, who has been authorized to superintend Greene County's share in the relief work.

Captain Cornwell took immediate steps to organize a corps of relief workers Thursday following receipt of a letter from Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, Columbus, requesting the co-operation of Company L.

Great numbers of unemployed are unable to provide food or clothing for their children, it is pointed out by Adjutant General Henderson, who asserts this is not only

MARINES FAIL TO VERIFY STORY THAT GENERAL SANDINO IS DEAD

MANAGUA, Jan. 20.—United States marine headquarters is not yet satisfied that reports of the death of General Sandino, rebel leader, are correct.

The marines are proceeding with the utmost caution in moving forward in the El Chipote region, formerly held by Sandino, lest the withdrawal of his forces and reports of his death constitute a maneuver to lead the marines into a position where they may be attacked. There are some fears also that Sandino has mined the region heavily and retired.

While it is apparent that there has been a withdrawal of Sandino's tas and there are indications of some defections from the rebel ranks, marine headquarters is fully cognizant of a still dangerous situation.

A skirmish near Leon is accepted as indication that the rebels have not given up the fight, and there is a growing belief that the withdrawals around El Chipote are in the nature of a strategic move.

For congress to authorize such exportations would be but one step removed from open declaration of war. And congress, accountable for its acts to the American people, would hesitate a long time before voting such an authorization.

This is the theory of the new anti-war resolution, which has introduced by Rep. Theodore Burton, of Ohio, long president of the American Peace Society and champion of world peace.

The resolution prescribes a penalty for its violation, a fine not exceeding $10,000 or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both.

A welcoming committee and a large group of supporters of the Irish Free State were to take President Cosgrave aboard the municipal steamer Macom for a tour of the harbor. He was to be officially received by Mayor Walker at the City Hall just before noon.

President Cosgrave then will be taken in charge by a committee from Chicago and headed for the Illinois city at once.

APPEALS TO POLICE FOR PROTECTION ON ESCAPE FROM THUGS

Chauffeur Arrested—
Claim Ex-Columnist
Heads Plotters

LYNN, Mass., Jan. 20.—Frederick W. Enwright, newspaper publisher of Lynn and Boston, and his wife and nineteen-year-old daughter, were under police guard today as the result of a kidnaping complaint Enwright lodged with local police.

Kidnaped by a band of thugs led by a newspaper columnist formerly employed by him, the publisher said he was driven to a lonely camp in Nahant, was told he was to be killed for $25,000 and his body thrown into the harbor but was released after agreeing to pay $1,000 for his life.

Frederick R. Dutton, 25, of this city, chauffeur of Enwright, was arrested on five serious charges.

Search was begun by police for the columnist and two other men known as "Cannonball" and "The Snake."

Enwright said that he had been threatened before by the columnist, the latter declaring that Enwright owed him money for his newspaper work.

The kidnapers, Enwright told police, not only threatened his life, but plotted to kidnap and hold for ransom his daughter, who is 19 years old.

"This is no publicity stunt," he is my life. They're out to get me. It looks as if they're going to, the publisher told police.

According to Enwright's sensational story, he asked his chauffeur to drive him from his Ocean Avenue home to Boston.

Instead, according to Enwright, the chauffeur started along North Shore Drive. The columnist and the two thugs—"Cannonball" and "The Snake," swung up in another machine. The columnist applied to the running board of Enwright's sedan and getting inside placed a pistol against Enwright's ribs.

The band took the publisher, he said, to a camp in Nahant, tied him up, discussed killing him but finally allowed him to go on promise of $1,000 for his life.

Once out of the hands of his kidnapers, Enwright appealed to the police and an investigation was immediately started.

Dutton, the chauffeur, who is 25 years old, married, and the father of one daughter, has been employed by Enwright for three years. He denied taking part in any kidnaping plot, claimed that Boston and then went to a garage in Brighton to have the car repaired. Police said that a check-up of his story showed that he had not been at the garage. He was then arrested on four charges—assault with intent to murder, kidnapping, attempted blackmail and attempted extortion.

RELATIVES CLAIM VICTIMS OF POISON

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 20.—The four bodies of the family of James Potter, victims of a deadly poison, will be taken to Steubenville, O., today by relatives for interment Saturday.

Frank McDougall and Joseph Tweed, brothers-in-law of Potter, came here from Steubenville and claimed the bodies.

Authorities have learned that Potter, formerly a wealthy Steubenville banker and realtor, feared the law and made a last frantic effort to escape arraignment on a money fraud charge, a few minutes before he poisoned himself and then gave his wife Lulu, 43, and his two sons James Jr., 16, and Robert, 14 "cough medicine" containing deadly poison.

Potter called former Probate Judge John Belknap, his attorney at Steubenville, on the long distance telephone Wednesday night, to ask him if the embarrassing charge against him could be quashed by paying $500 to the complaining witness. Belknap, it was said, advised Potter to come to Steubenville and first plead not guilty.

Forty-five minutes later the publisher family was dead in their home, here, police said.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Before another century has waned its way down the corridors of time, the world will be remodeled to the heart's desire of man—a world devoid of pain, worry, poverty, brutality—emancipated from the overwhelming crusher of dreams and achievement—routine.

It is sound psychology that our conscious actions and efforts respond to the vision of an end to be attained. Physical man, his mind and body and soul, will be remodeled along lines that will correspond to the new and ideal conditions of tomorrow—fatiguing manual labor will be banished and we'll work "for an age at a sitting and never be tired at all."

Dr. Henry D. Hubbard, an outstanding American scientist and secretary of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, is the painter of this alluring picture of future life in the civilized world, and he bases his prediction, not on dreams and fancy, but upon the remarkable accomplishments of science.

"Man's mind is far too valuable for creative work to waste on doing the same thing twice in the same way," Dr. Hubbard told the International News Service today.

"Since measurement is the quest for truth and truth makes men free, we begin to see a universal function of measurement—we measure our way to emancipation from the routine by such analysis of skill that we can specify it in units of measurement."

APPEALS TO POLICE FOR PROTECTION ON ESCAPE FROM THUGS

Chauffeur Arrested; Claim Ex-Columnist Heads Plotters

LYNN, Mass., Jan. 20.—Frederick W. Enwright, newspaper publisher of Lynn and Boston, and his wife and nineteen-year-old daughter, were under police guard today as the result of a kidnapping complaint Enwright lodged with local police.

Kidnaped by a band of thugs led by a newspaper columnist formerly employed by him, the publisher said he was driven to a lonely camp in Nahant, was told he was to be killed for $25,000 and his body thrown into the harbor but was released after agreeing to pay $1,000 for his life.

Frederick R. Dutton, 25, of this city, chauffeur of Enwright, was arrested on five serious charges.

Search was begun by police for the columnist and two other men known as "Cannonball" and "The Snake."

Enwright said that he had been threatened before by the columnist, the latter declaring that Enwright owed him money for his newspaper work.

The kidnappers, Enwright told police, had only intended to scare him, but plotted to kidnap and hold for ransom his daughter, who is in my life. They're out to get it. It looks as if they're going to, the publisher told police.

According to Enwright's sensational story, he asked his chauffeur to drive him from his Ocean Avenue home in Boston.

Instead, according to Enwright, the chauffeur started along North Shore Drive. The columnist and the two thugs—"Cannonball" and "The Snake," swung up in another machine. The columnist applied to the running board of Enwright's sedan and getting inside placed a pistol against Enwright's ribs.

The band took the publisher, he said, to a camp in Nahant, tied him up, discussed killing him but finally allowed him to go on promise of $1,000 for his life.

Once out of the hands of his kidnappers, Enwright appealed to the police and an investigation was immediately started.

Dutton, the chauffeur, who is 25 years old, married, and the father of one daughter, has been employed by Enwright for three years. He denied taking part in the kidnapping. RELATIVES CLAIM VICTIMS OF POISON

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 20.—The four bodies of the family of James Potter, victims of a deadly poison, will be taken to Steubenville, O., today by relatives for interment Saturday.

Frank McDougall and Joseph Tweed, brothers-in-law of Potter, came here from Steubenville and claimed the bodies.

Authorities have learned that Potter, formerly a wealthy Steubenville banker and realtor, feared the law and made a last frantic effort to escape arraignment on a money fraud charge, a few minutes before he poisoned himself and then gave his wife Lulu, 43, and his two sons James Jr., 18, and Robert, 14 "cough medicine" containing deadly poison.

Potter claimed former Probate Judge John Belknap, his attorney at Steubenville, on the long distance telephone Wednesday night, to ask him if the embezzling charge against him could be washed by paying $500 to the complaining witness. Belknap, it was said, advised Potter to come to Steubenville and first plead not guilty. Forty-five minutes later the Potter family was dead in their home, here, police said.

CHAPTER I

"Every Jack has his Jill, or so we heard old ladies say. If that's true, then every Jill must have her Jack. Maybe I've one waiting on me tonight. Um, yeh, maybe!"

Something of a dubious, if not doubtful shrug followed this brief colloquy, as Jillian (Jill) Justin, paused for an instant on the stair landing of her old home.

It was the night of the big August festival in the West Virginia glass town, and Peter Justin, meeting his lovely daughter at the foot of the stairs, looked her over with adoring eyes.

"You are very charming, my dear," he said smiling. His glance strayed to the handsome youth standing near the door, and again Peter marveled that he should have fathered two such wonderful children.

Both were of the brunette type, with the sparkling beauty of their Spanish grandmother, and the grace and poise of their French ancestry apparent in their every movement. Jill was 20, her brother 19.

The two were in party dress. Jill's gown, a rich wine-colored silk with sheer silk stockings to match, lent a finishing touch to her lambent beauty. Tony wore a tuxedo, a white silk waistcoat, a wing collar and a white lawn tie.

"Wonder, Tony, how many poor laddies are due for heart break tonight?" went on Peter, musingly, his handsome brown eyes twinkling as they turned again to the glowing girl in the wine-colored gown.

"Not so many as there might be, if our Lady of hot colors would get a move on herself now at last that she's all set to go!" grumbled the impatient brother, who had been kept waiting a full three minutes.

"Our Lady" tossed her boyishly bobbed head of glossy raven hue and essayed a lady-like sniff.

"I wasn't aware," she said, with fine sisterly sarcasm, "that in the occasion called for any tremendous burst of speed. It's just a jazz party—and at the Palace, so why the rush? However, now that I am 'at last' all set to go—" She laid a tentative hand on her brother's sleeve—"please lead on, MacDuff!"

MacDuff led on and out across an old-fashioned porch, a short stretch of brick walk, at the foot of which stood a roadster just built for two.

"What a glorious night!" breathed the girl, rapturously, as she settled herself in the low cushioned seat and looked up at the starlit heavens, where the big full moon rode in majestic splendor. There was a vibrant note in the music-box tones that sang in Youth's ecstasy of love and joy and romance.

The motor responded with a roar. Then, like a wild thing gone suddenly mad, the car plunged forward, athrob with life and action, down the straight-away drive, and out onto the main highway. Jill was on her way at 40 miles an hour, to meet Romance and her Fate.

It was just around the bend at the foot of the mountain that Jill and Tony heard the two pistol shots and got her first glimpse of a bona fide hold up. Here it was, too, that the roadster came to an abrupt stop, its running board parallel with that of a big black car drawn up on the left side and facing them. On the big car's running board stood two men. Looking past them Jill's gaze rested for a fleeting instant on the form of a man lying at the side of the road.

Then things began to happen with lightning rapidity; such things as Jill, in her wildest imaginings, had never considered.

"Sap th' bloke an' cop th' moll!" These strange words shot from the big man behind on the running board. Before she had grasped their meaning the man in front, with the visor of his cap pulled down to conceal his features, had stepped over on their running board, reached across in front of her, and brought down a blackjack on Tony's head.

Everything happened so swiftly that neither Jill nor Tony had the least chance to defend themselves. Horror-stricken, the girl heard the sickening thud of the blackjack against her brother's head. The next instant she felt herself lifted bodily from her seat, swung across and jammed down on the seat of the big roadster.

She tried to scream, but the muscles of her throat seemed paralyzed, and at the second attempt a vile-smelling hand was clamped over her mouth. While she struggled helplessly in the big man's arms the other got the car under way. A moment or so later they whizzed past her home at a speed of 60 miles an hour.

Scenes like those she had witnessed in motion picture plays flitted before her mind's eye with grotesque exaggeration. Newspaper accounts of bodies found in lonely spots—stories she had read of mutilated victims—all seemed to pass in fragmentary patches through her muddled brain. Again she heard the dull thud of the blackjack at it descended on poor Tony's head—saw once more the still form of the man lying at the side of the road. If she could only just concentrate—confine her thoughts—

"Listen, little girl!" The man at her side, his left arm laid across her shoulders, to prevent her, presumably, from leaping out of the car, was speaking. She turned at the sound of his voice and tried to distinguish his features in the moonlight. But the visor of his cap hid his face effectually. He leaned closer.

"Listen, kid, to what I'm a-tellin' yuh," he went on, speaking fast but distinctly. "You needn't be afraid. We ain't gonna hurt yuh.

"What a Glorious Night!" Breathed the Girl Rapturously.

We just took ye along wit' us so's yuh couldn't squeal to th' cops about th' stick-up yuh saw. We'll turn yuh loose in a little while, if yer good—maybe. And now if yuh promise not to try to jump I'll let go of yuh. Do yuh promise?"

"I-w-won't jump!" stuttered Jill, fearfully, and doubting his avowal about letting her go free soon. From what she had seen and heard she was certain these men had no intention of giving her the freedom he had promised. What did he mean about "taking her along so she couldn't squeal to th' cops?" Was it because of the man she had seen lying by the side of the road?

Gradually something like an understanding of the situation began to form in her mind. These two men, she told herself, must have held up the driver of this roadster. They had shot him and it was his body she had seen. Now they were taking her from telling the police, Jill's constructive findings were essentially correct—insofar as they carried. But they lacked one very important detail. It was true that her captors were taking the car belonging to the man she had seen lying by the side of the road. What her findings failed to encompass was the very pertinent fact that while the men were taking the victim's car the car's rear end was taking the victim himself.

And so while the poor man clings to his precarious perch on the end farthest from those enemies, hangs within the enclosed space of his two spare balloon tires, let us introduce him. Please, everybody, meet Mr. Jack Milton Stuart, recently of Hillsdale, Ky., and until recently—en route to New York to seek his fortune.

At the moment of his introduction, Jack, it may be inferred, is deeply engaged in trying to adjust furrow across his skull just a minute or so before. The sight not only dissipated the pain, but stirred him into instantaneous action. Hence it came about that when his car began once more to get under way, it carried an extra passenger in the person of its owner, concealed from the sight of those in front.

It was fortunate for this passenger that his two balloon tires were bolted to the car's rear dack, on a slant of some 45 degrees. Thus the tires not only provided him a seat a full foot in width, but the angle at which they hung held him from being bounced out when the car began "hitting only the high spots." This cute little seat had furnished a resting place for hoboes and small boys on divers occasions, but never had he appreciated until this moment the rare possibilities of his "spare balloons."

"Now, I wonder," mused Jack Stuart, and he began cautiously to search himself. A moment later the realization struck him that his hunch had been only too true. They had relieved him of his bankroll, something over a thousand dollars, and his watch, which had cost him a hundred. They had even taken his cigaret case. Oh, well. . . .

With careful consideration of the handicaps he faced, Jack summed up the situation and its possibilities. They were not as promising as he could wish, but—Jack Stuart came of a tribe closely associated with the John Paul Jones clan. It was when the battle seemed hopelessly lost that they really began to fight. Jack Stuart hadn't even begun, as yet, to fight.

But a canny Scot was Jack, and he saw no sense in starting anything until he had at least a Chinaman's chance for victory. Only fools rushed in where gunmen

A glance at the sky directly above showed him that clouds were forming; there was a threat of rain in the air. . . . If the moon would slip behind a heavy cloud long enough to enable him to crawl over to the left-side running board. . . . his service Colt was in a pocket on the inside, just above the seat.

The sky above thickened. Suddenly the moon disappeared and Jack Stuart seized his opportunity. It was no small feat he was attempting as he soon realized, and the road was none too smooth. But once he had a hand on the edge of the broad mud guard, he breathed easier.

Another acrobatic twist and his feet were on the running board. Now for the delicate operation of lifting the gun, unobserved, and uncaught.

Luck again favored him. . . . The big fellow guarding Jill, fearing, perhaps, that she would try to jump in the gloom, was using both arms to hold her. He sat well over on the seat, the girl of course, between him and the fellow at the wheel. It was the latter of whom Jack had to be careful.

Crouching low, he worked his right hand, with extreme care, over the side of the seat, and unbuttoned the pocket flap. The gun was there!

Jack Stuart fully appreciated the desperate character of the men with whom he had to deal. He knew they were both armed, and that neither would hesitate an instant to shoot him down if he gave them the least opening. He must acquire first an advantage and then throw the fear of death into them.

There was just one way to do this, and in the light of what had occurred, Jack Stuart had no compunctions whatever in doing it. The driver's back was dimly outlined in the gloom just in front of him. Grasping the gun firmly by its barrel, he brought the heavy butt down on the fellow's head, protected slightly by his cap!

BOISTEROUS WINDS PLAY HAVOC FRIDAY WITH PEDESTRIANS

Boisterous, blustering winds, their direction constantly changing to make Xenians uncomfortable, swirling gusts of snow, and a sudden drop in the temperature, combined to provide a suffering city with a large and peculiar patch of "weather" Friday.

The violence of the wind, although unabated from the preceding day, resulted in no serious reports of damage in any part of the county.

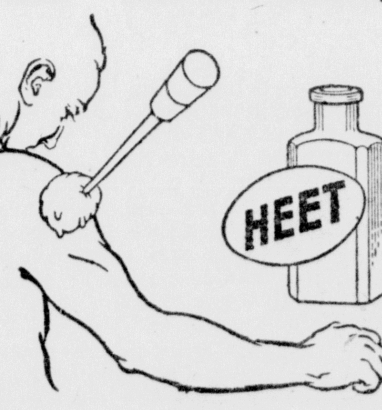

The Ohio Bell Telephone Co. suffered to the greatest extent from the high winds. Between seventy-five and 100 poles were reported blown down in various parts of the county but repairs were made immediately and service was quickly restored.

Scattered reports of wire trouble were received due to falling telephone poles and wires, in some instances caused by the falling of trees and branches.

CEDAR CLIFF CHAPTER HOLDS NOVEL MEETING.

Miss Kathleen Blair opened her home in Cedarville Thursday to members of Cedar Cliff Chapter, D. A. R. Mrs. Albert Powers was the assistant hostess.

Invitations to the meeting had been issued in rhyme and asked the members to attend dressed in "Ellis Island style." Many nations were represented in the costumes and the various "make-ups" contributed to the success of the meeting.

A committee was appointed during the business meeting to place markers in the name of the chapter on the graves of two Revolutionary soldiers, John Townsley and Robert Jackson, in the Stevenson Cemetery.

Delegates to the State Conference in Cleveland were appointed. Mrs. Howard Turnbull will be regent delegate and others will be Mrs. Charles Ervin, Mrs. H. C. Autman, Mrs. J. S. West, Mrs. Fred Buck and Mrs. Fred Townsley.

A box for Ellis Island was packed, under the direction of Mrs. Charles Ervin, from the "showers" of substantial gifts from the members.

A delightful refreshment course was served by the hostesses.

LAW ENFORCEMENT SUBJECT OF TALK.

Mrs. Oren Coblenz entertained the members of the chapter at her home on the Upper Bellbrook Pike, Wednesday evening in celebration of "Victory Day." About seventy were present. Miss Zetta McClelland, president, presided at the business meeting.

The devotions were led by Mrs. L. McClelland. The subject for the evening was "Law Enforcement" in charge of Mrs. Clint Beal and Mrs. R. L. Gowdy. Mrs. Gowdy introduced the speaker, Mr. J. A. Finney, who in his talk, recommended as an aid to law enforcement, highway patrol, a system of registration and identification papers for everyone, deleting from daily papers details of sensational crimes and a strict censor of motion pictures.

Mrs. William Weiss delighted the audience with several readings. Following the program, the social committee served a refreshment course of sandwiches, pickles, baked beans and coffee.

NORTHWEST TRIP IS DESCRIBED TO CLUB

Members of the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club were taken several thousand miles into the interior of Alaska and past the Arctic Circle, in the graphically described travelogue lecture of Mr. M. J. Gibbons, Dayton, Thursday night at the Knights of Pythias Hall.

Mr. Gibbons showed motion pictures of his travels through the northwest, last summer, preceding the picture show with a description of his travels, taking the place of Mr. Hugh E. Wall, also of Dayton, who was prevented in attending by an important business engagement. The meeting was well attended and opened with the usual delicious dinner, served by the Pythian Sisters. The tables were prettily appointed in pastel colors. Miss May Fletcher, Mrs. Elizabeth Stevenson, Mrs. C. B. Mowrer, Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson and Miss Velma Witham composed the hostess committee.

Routine business was transacted before Mr. Gibbons' talk.

Women of the Old Town Run Community are invited to the home of Mrs. Albert Bickett, Monday, January 23 at 1 o'clock for the first work in the vegetable cooking project, sponsored by the Farm Bureau.

Church last Tuesday, will speak to young women at the home of Mrs. George Street, 310 E. Third St., Saturday at 2:30 p. m. WIPING OUT ILL WILL OF NEIGHBORS

The ill-will and suspicion with which many of the nations of South and Central America have regarded the United States in recent years has been dispelled largely by two recent important events.

The address of President Coolidge at the opening of the Pan-American congress at Havana has seemed to have a favorable reaction throughout most of the countries south of the Rio Grande. The President made a special effort to convince the nations represented at the Havana congress that the United States has only good-will for its neighbors, that this country, because it is more powerful than the others, does not seek to dominate over or dictate to them, but that each and every nation is on an equal plane and deserving of equal consideration regardless of its size.

The sincerity and friendliness of the President's address has gone far to wipe out that bitter feeling held for this country in many southern capitals.

The way for the particular settlement of Mr. Coolidge was the establishment of more friendly relations between the United States and Mexico following the sending of Ambassador Gurnea and the firing of Lindbergh to Mexico. One of the difficulties between these two nations the South and Central American countries sympathized with Mexico. This was natural because of racial and linguistic ties, the majority of the people being of Spanish descent.

So by winning the friendship and confidence of Mexico the same thing has been accomplished in large part in the case of a dozen other countries. The work of the American delegation at Havana is also contributing to the pleasing things already accomplished.

CHURCHES TO LIGHT THE WAY

Churches will soon carry big electric signs on their facades as do the theatres, according to the prediction of William Hodge, famous American actor.

"The church should advertise like the theatre," says this Broadway star. "I enjoy a good sermon, and when I am on the road I pick out a church to attend according to the sign out front. If I see just the name of the building and who the minister is in charge, I pass it by. But if there is a big sign, announcing some subject that attracts and holds me, I mark that church and return to it gladly. The religious speaker should advertise what he is going to talk about, the same way as a play's title is advertised—in electric lights if necessary."

For the decrease in interest in religion today, Mr. Hodge blames only the churches themselves. "All the theatres are not crowded any more than all the churches are empty," he points out. "An empty theatre means something wrong, and an empty church means about the same thing. Preachers say it is the fault of the people who do not come out. Managers might make the same complaint when a play they put on is a failure. Make the churches attractive in respect to the message they bring and the problem of the empty pew will be solved. Religion is a serious business, to be sure, but when it becomes too serious, it is apt to become dull."

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

EVERYBODY'S PRESIDENT

Too much talk about some candidate for president whom the farmers want, or some other candidate whom "big business" wants. No group in the United States of America has the exclusive right to a candidate. This country ought not to be looking for a specialized candidate for president. Above all we want for president a big man with a broad perspective and with imagination and with an appreciation of the needs of all groups. We don't want any one-crowd candidates.

PLENTY TO DO

Jastrow, eminent psychologist of the University of Wisconsin, says man's brain is the same as it was 150,000 years ago. "The old instincts and emotions—fear, hunger and anger—still play the most important part in life," he says. "There has been no change."

WAR AND RUBBER

Edison predicts Europe will make war on the United States, and he is devoting his time to the search for means whereby this nation can quickly produce its own rubber. It would be a great thing for our industrial progress if we were less dependent on others for our supply of the "makings" of rubber. More power to Edison—but why predict war with Europe? Predictions have a part in the making of war. Let's talk about something else.

THEY KNOW

In an inquiry into the plans of a large number of big business firms in this country it is learned that one-third of the number have decided to increase the amount they have been spending for advertising. This number will doubtless be much increased before the year is over. Big business concerns no longer have to be told what advertising will do. Sales beyond the wildest dreams of earlier promoters are now part of the regular schedule of manufacturers and merchants—because of the amazing increase in the habit of advertising. And the possibilities of advertising are just beginning to be sensed. It is still a new practice—on a large scale—and is capable of enormous development. Those who have the courage to make that development will reap the harvest of greater sales and greater profits.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—A unique establishment on the lower East Side is announced as the forerunner of a city-wide movement. The first of the new type tenements is a condensed and erected by the Frederick L. Lavenburg Foundation was put into operation recently. In seeking to raise the city birth rate and to provide adequate housing for poor families, the Foundation has erected a modern apartment building on Goerick street—the heart of the ghetto—which is open only to those with children. Each apartment is restricted, likewise, according to the number of children and to the salary of the head of the house.

Thus, a three-room suite rents for $7.50 a week and is restricted to a family with not more than two children with a minimum income of $25 a week. Four-room flats are restricted to three or four children, and five rooms to five or six children. The former rents for $8.50 a week and the latter for $10.50. Minimum incomes are $30 and $40 dollars a week, respectively.

Obviously, the apartments are worth far more than their price. Each one has brass plumbing, built-in showers, parquet floors, built-in ice boxes and modern gas stoves. The H-shaped building allows for more than usual light. In the basement are two assembly rooms and a kindergarten. A garden and playground on the roof is intended to keep the children off the street.

A mob of anxious housewives are about to move in, now. Four years ago, when Mr. Lavenburg first made the announcement of his plan, applications for apartments began to pour in and it was necessary to select the present lessees from some two thousand applicants.

I suspect that there will be some confusion in following out this plan. Successive births and deaths will keep the families dizzy; moving from three to four rooms and back again in accordance with the quota regulations. However, having looked about a good deal I know that, despite the Lavenburg apartment location, these are very valuable flats. Ordinarily, a three-room flat such as I saw there would rent for at least $100 a month. For the first time, in my knowledge, New York's poor are getting a break.

This year, the newspaper boys have broken down and confessed all. Formerly it was the custom for managing editors, about New Year's, to pay for all reports of persons treated for alcoholism, simply an extra heavy drunk. Next day, if twenty bums had been brought to Bellevue, suffering from drink, the papers blandly headlined, "TWENTY TREATED FOR POISON HOLI-DAY MOOZE." Men who had died from over-drinking were listed among the "poison liquor victims."

This year, the sheets were conscientious enough to draw the line between victims of denaturants and victims of harmless alcohol. Recently, the bubble burst. A reporter interviewed a Bellevue medic in charge of the alcohol ward. "Doctor," he asked, "what is your opinion about the flood of poison liquor?" "That's a lot of bunk," said the physician harshly. And with the remark, went the essence of a good scare story.

An Episode at Monte Carlo. The smallest wager one can make at the roulette wheels in Monte Carlo is about 40 cents. Being half Scotch, 40 cents seemed like a lot of wager with the odds definitely against us; but nevertheless I bought a chip, determined not to be a Prince of Monaco when adversity beckoned. I laid my one chip on the red. And to my amazement, the red won. I doubled my money.

At this point Dr. Brinkhoff counseled prudence. "It isn't every day that you can show 100 per cent profit," he said. "If you keep on playing you are almost sure to lose your entire investment. Why not cash in now while you're ahead?"

Eager as I was to amass a comfortable fortune, at the expense of the Prince of Monaco, I listened to his sound advice, turned in my two chips and stalked out of the casino, jingling 40 cents sheer velvet.

Outside I noticed a small post card shop and determined to send a card to tell of my fortune to a minister friend who has often warned me against gambling.

While negotiating for this post card, an odd thing happened. A powerfully-built Italian who had also been buying post cards, said something to me in such an affable tone, that I assumed he had some kind of services to sell me.

"No," I told him, in the purest of English, "I'm not interested."

"But, monsieur," he began, and made a sweeping gesture toward the door, as if to suggest the beauties that lay beyond.

"Oh, you're a guide, are you?" I replied. "Nevertheless, I'm not interested in whatever you wish to show me. I've seen pretty much everything about here. Moreover, I have just succeeded in beating the game at the casino. As soon as I buy a post card on which to write of my success, I shall leave Monaco, perhaps forever."

"He didn't seem to understand my English, but kept on talking. No longer mild and agreeable as at first, he now became so emphatic that the girl clerk looked

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Make-up for Luncheon and Afternoon Tea

If you have had a strenuous morning on the golf links, in the shops or with the work about your house, save a few minutes for rest and a relaxing beauty treatment before you dress for your afternoon tea or luncheon. Film your face with your favorite cream, and then lie down with a compress of absorbent cotton soaked in a refreshing lotion over your eyes. There are especially good anti-wrinkle lotions that will absorb all the "tired look" and leave your eyes bright and clear. Some of the best should be applied heated. After a few minutes, remove the compress and pat it all over your face and throat. You can remove the excess with a cleansing tissue and then begin your make-up. This will serve as a powder base for the conservative woman.

Many women like to use a real powder base in order to be sure that their make-up will be adherent. There is a new foundation balm made in a special rachel shade that will harmonize with every shade of skin and powder. These shades are preferred to a white powder base by many women, because they give a much more natural effect for daytime.

An exceptionally good powder base, of this nature, has as one of the important ingredients, the essence of water lily buds, and is the direct outcome of the vogue for dark make-up which started in the fashionable resorts along the Southern coast of France. The vogue has been carried to such extremes that many women use a bronze oil and dark brown powder which gives them a rich, oriental appearance. I predict that this vogue marks the beginning of the end of pure white powder foundations for daytime use. It has taught women how much more becoming their make-up can be if they use a tinted base, and I believe that even after the fad for the bronzed make-up has disappeared, the colored powder foundation will remain.

Now you have applied your foundation, work in a little rouge-encreme. Powder thoroughly, being sure to include your neck at least an inch or two below the neckline of your dress. The shade of your rouge and lipstick should depend a great deal upon the color of costume you are wearing. I always advise women to have two or three shades of rouge and powder on hand, so they can blend them to harmonize with their costumes and the occasion, or the mood, so as to suit their varying complexion tones.

Green calls for a liberal amount of color in your cheeks. For the coral, pinkish and tan shades, rouge and lipstick of the red-garnet shade is most attractive. If you are the type who ordinarily uses a dark rouge, you can add just a dash of the lighter. For the deep claret and purple shades, the red raspberry rouge is best. Blue calls for a clear, fresh-looking skin, so you must be especially careful that your powder and rouge are well-balanced. It is a color that is likely to show up the imperfections of your skin. You can use either the lighter or darker shades of rouge with blue, but you must be sure that you have applied it with the utmost care. Black, of course, is the easiest color for every woman to wear, and it will prove a good setting for any make-up that is becoming to your own type and coloring of hair, eyes and skin.

Even for dress-up occasions in the daytime, I advise a conservative eye make-up. Use a touch of eye shadow over the upper eyelids, as I recommend for street make-up, and apply an eyelash grower and darkener to your lashes, rather than mascara. The slight hint of rouge just under the eyebrows may be employed.

Tomorrow I am going to tell you about "Make-up for the Informal Dinner."

Diet and Health

ARE YOU GOING TO DIE FROM HEART DISEASE?

We're all going to die from sunburn, sooner or later, and most of us hope for later. However, if we don't watch our step, it may be sooner. Yes, from heart disease.

Mortality statistics show that the number of deaths from heart disease is distinctly on the increase. In fact, heart disease now leads the list of causes of death in the United States.

I'm going to give you some of the explanations that are given to account for the increased mortality from heart disease, from a paper on the subject by Dr. Henry Albert, given in the October 15, 1927 Journal of the American Medical Association.

1. Death from heart disease occurs chiefly after the age of 45. Now as there has been an increase in the average length of life, therefore there are more people who live to the "heart disease" age. The reason for 40 per cent of the deaths after 45, from heart disease, is hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis).

2. Decreased numbers of deaths from infectious diseases, especially diphtheria, scarlet fever and tuberculosis.

3. Old age. There are some who ascribe the increase in heart disease to a normal ageing process. This is the higher age group is chiefly that of hardening of the arteries.

4. Increase in the proportion of the population who have recovered from infectious, but whose hearts have been injured by them. (Acute rheumatic fever causes a permanent rise. A permanent rise in blood pressure usually results in arteriosclerosis.)

Are you interested in lessening the mortality rate from heart disease? All right, work with all your might and main, then, toward the improvement of hygienic habits in yourself and others. A few of the things to take thought of, are a daily exercise period, some time in the open air and sunshine, a balanced diet, sufficient sleep, and prevention and cure of overweight. You're no doubt noticed that I pay a great deal of attention in the column to overweight. You can see now one of the reasons for it. TODAY'S RECIPES

Creole Ham—Buy a slice of ham about an inch thick. Brown it in a frying pan and then place in a casserole and cover with the following sauce: One-half cup of chili sauce, one-half cup catsup, one tablespoon vinegar, one and one-half teaspoons of flour, one teaspoon sugar and one-half teaspoon dry mustard.

Nut bread—Four cups flour, three-fourths cup sugar, one egg, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one cup milk, one cup English walnuts, broken. Place in bread pan and let rise one-half hour. Bake three-quarters of an hour.

SUGGESTIONS

Reinforced Soles. One housewife found that her husband wore large holes in the heels of his woolen socks very quickly. To remedy this she took a piece of heavy denim cloth and basted it over the heel of his new socks with strong thread. The socks now last twice as long, and she spends less time darning.

seems to be such a factor in heart disease:

1. Overeating and overdrinking, unbalanced diets (especially diets that are too high in acid ash residue—flesh foods, eggs, cereals and breads).
2. Chronic toxemias (poison), from sources of infections in the body or from outside.
3. Over and under-exercise and overwork.
4. Psychic: Fear, excitement, anger, mental stress, will cause a temporary rise in blood pressure. If indulged in too frequently, there may be a permanent rise. A permanent rise in blood pressure usually results in arteriosclerosis.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Senator Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, answered "no" to the roll call one day, on a bill the senators were voting on, and the senate clock stopped.

Maybe it was pure coincidence, but Frank's wellow lawmakers won't admit it. They say the vibration of his shout did the business.

From this it may be judged that Frank has a good deal of voice. He has, indeed. Nobody else on Capitol Hill pretends to be able to holler in comparison with him. He owes his prominence—for there's no question that he's a prominent senator—in great part to his vocal equipment. This isn't to imply that he hasn't other qualifications, but that's his most noticeable one—most immediately noticeable, anyway.

Frank's also a majestic-looking individual. He's very large and very dignified.

In fact, he's senatorial in his appearance. In the cases of some senators you're surprised, at first, to think that such physical insignificant little fellows have risen to positions of so much importance. Not so with Frank. You'd pick him out of a crowd as a likely party for high political honors.

Neither is Frank the least bit backward.

When the feeling came over him that he'd make a good Republican presidential candidate, he didn't hesitate a minute about saying so.

He and Senator Curtis, as we're all aware, are the only aspirants on both the two big parties put together who have definitely declared themselves. There are a great many others, as we likewise know, who'd accept a nomination if sufficiently urged, but only Curtis and Willis have actually invited the lightning to strike them.

It shouldn't be imagined, however, that Curtis resembles Willis in the least.

Curtis is rather a self-effacing old gentleman. Of course he was conscious that Kansans were mentioning him as a "favorite son," on the strength of which he admitted, very modestly, that he appreciated the compliment and would greatly like to be his party's standard bearer.

Willis didn't wait for anybody to mention him. He mentioned himself—and in the same tone that he employed to stop the senate clock.

Politicians don't consider his chances particularly bright, but he's attracting a certain amount of attention, nevertheless—simply by talking so loudly and looking so imposing that people can't help hearing him, and, having heard him, giving him a look, which he repays, by looking first class.

He has completely drowned out and out-shone Speaker Nick Longworth, for instance, who, hailing from Frank's home state, was regarded a few months ago as quite a little presidential possibility, whereas Frank, at that stage of the game, wasn't supposed to be a possibility at all.

Yes, it would be the surprise of their lives to the politicians if the Republicans should nominate Frank Willis for president, but that doesn't mean that he won't have a lot to say at the convention—literally and politically, both.

He'll have a pretty sizeable chunk of votes under his thumb. Though it's most unlikely it will be big enough to win with, it may come in very handy to help somebody else.

Undoubtedly Frank has thought of this himself.

He isn't voice and "front" exclusively. Those merely are his most obvious assets. He's a tolerably smooth political manager, too.

WEDDING CUSTOMS

I do hope this answer is not too late. I just this moment opened the letter. In case it is in this particular case, it may help some other couples who are not sure of the rules governing double wedding ceremonies.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young girl, almost 20, and am engaged to a man six years my senior. Do you think that is too much difference in age? We both have what most young people would consider an old-fashioned idea of love and marriage. We have planned a double ring ceremony, and I would like you to tell me just how they are conducted. Which ring is given first, and where should the girl carry the ring during the ceremony? We are to be married at the home of one of our friends. My friend and her husband are to stand with us. Isn't it proper for the other gentleman to see after such things as the license and the minister's fee, which have been given to him by the groom?" Should the rings match, in case the bride's ring is of white gold, engraved and set with diamonds? I don't recall ever having seen a gentleman's wedding ring of white gold.

It was in North Carolina, where the colored people are looked on by their "white folks" pretty much as if they were children grown up. A northerner tells of his southern visit, doctor, being approached by a colored man, more or less dependent upon the physician's bounty.

The darky carried in his hand a prescription blank, which he fingered hesitantly before asking his benefactor, with just a shade of suggestion in his tone, where he was supposed to have it filled in.

"Take it right over there to that drug store, uncle," the doctor said, "and remember I don't pay for having it filled."

"But," came the mournful remonstrance, "that 'scription don't do me no good 'tall if yoh don't pay for having it filled."

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

GOODBYE! PLEASANT DREAMS!

Peter half expected that Screech Owl would wait again at Crow's mentioning his wife, just as he had done before. But this time not a sound came from the direction of the hollow tree. Peter stepped carefully along until he had reached the open doorway of Owl's house, then he bent down and peered in.

It was pitch dark inside and it took him a moment to get used to the blackness, but at last Peter discovered Owl huddled in a heap with his head tucked under his feathers.

"Goodbye, Screech Owl," said Peter softly. "If you are asleep I do not want to disturb you, but if you are not I want to thank you for coming, and talking to me when you did not wish to. And may I come to see you again? What night would be most convenient?"

Not a word answered Screech Owl, although Peter repeated his questions twice. Finally the boy turned to speak to Crow and found that bird right at his heels trying to peer into the dusky interior of Owl's house.

"Now isn't that too bad?" asked the boy. "I did want Screech Owl to know how much I appreciated his being so nice to me. Why, he told me about Owl pellets and everything."

"Did he? Well I am surprised to hear that," declared Crow. "Generally Owl doesn't say much. In fact I have known him to refuse to speak a word, even when a bird wanted to know and something important. Between you and me, I believe that is the reason why he has the reputation of being so wise—because he seldom talks."

"That is what he said himself," declared Peter. "He argued enough to make any effort to keep his mouth shut this morning."

"Oh, he could not help himself," declared Crow, laughing. "Blue Jays and Crows always make him talk. He does not like us a bit. But after all, he's a good chap if you only let him alone; not had at heart, you know. Only he is the laziest bird I have ever seen. Look at him now. Sound asleep, as sure as you are born. And he went right off into napping while we were talking. Well, pleasant dreams old tuft-head. We don't wish you ill-luck, even if you were not polite enough to stay awake when I had gone to bed. And here I was hoping that you catch that early worm," laughed Peter, mounting his cold black steed and setting himself firmly upon Crow's back. "I shall come back to see you one of these fine nights, Owl, but I think that I shall wait until it is a bit warmer. I hope that by then you will be in a happier frame of mind, having found your lady love. Now then, Crow, I am ready. Do you mind if I tuck my fingers in under the feathers about your neck? They seem thickest there and my hands are almost frozen. I forgot to wear my mittens."

"Go as far as you like," declared Crow, slangily. "I believe that you will find that the warmest spot. My coat is nothing new like it is when I am well fed. There is no bird of them all who is more sleek than I am in the warm weather. One, two, three; off we go."

WIPING OUT ILL WILL OF NEIGHBORS

The ill-will and suspicion with which many of the nations of South and Central America have regarded the United States in recent years has been dispelled largely by two recent important events.

The address of President Coolidge at the opening of the Pan-American congress at Havana has seemed to have a favorable reaction throughout most of the countries south of the Rio Grande. The President made a special effort to convince the nations represented at the Havana congress that the United States has only good-will for its neighbors, that this country, because it is more powerful than the others, does not seek to dominate over or dictate to them, but that each and every nation is on an equal plane and deserving of equal consideration, regardless of its size.

The sincerity and friendliness of the President's address has done much to wipe out that bitter feeling held for this country by many of the nations of South and Central America.

The way for the particular achievement of Mr. Coolidge was paved by the establishment of more friendly relations between the United States and Mexico following the sending of the American expedition to Mexico in 1916. The United States and Mexico, two nations that have been at odds for many years, have now become friends. This was natural because of racial and linguistic ties, the language of the people being of Spanish descent.

So by winning the friendship and confidence of Mexico the same thing has been accomplished in large part in the case of a dozen other countries. The work of the American delegation at Havana is also contributing to the pleasing things already accomplished.

CHURCHES TO LIGHT THE WAY

Churches will soon carry big electric signs on their facades as do the theatres, according to the prediction of William Hodge, famous American actor.

"The church should advertise like the theatre," says this Broadway star. "I enjoy a good sermon, and when I am on the road I pick out a church to attend according to the sign out front. If I see just the name of the building and who the minister is in charge, I pass it by. But if there is a big sign, announcing some subject that attracts and holds me, I mark that church and return to it gladly. The religious speaker should advertise what he is going to talk about, the same way as a play's title is advertised—in electric lights if necessary."

For the decrease in interest in religion today, Mr. Hodge blames only the churches themselves. "All the theatres are not crowded any more than all the churches are empty," he points out. "An empty theatre means something wrong, and an empty church means about the same thing. Preachers say it is the fault of the people who do not come out. Managers might make the same complaint when a play they put on is a failure. Make the churches attractive in respect to the message they bring and the problem of the empty pew will be solved. Religion is a serious business, to be sure, but when it becomes too serious, it is apt to become dull."

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

EVERYBODY'S PRESIDENT

Too much talk about some candidate for president whom the farmers want, or some other candidate whom "big business" wants. No group in the United States of America has the exclusive right to a candidate. This country ought not to be looking for a specialized candidate for president. Above all we want for president a big man with a broad perspective and with imagination and with an appreciation of the needs of all groups. We don't want any one-crowd candidates.

It would be a great thing for our industrial progress if we were less dependent on others for our supply of the "makings" of rubber. More power to Edison—but why predict war with Europe? While negotiating for this post card, an odd thing happened. A powerfully-built Italian who had been buying post cards, said something to me in such an affable tone, that I assumed he had some kind of service to sell me.

"No," I told him, in the purest of English, "I'm not interested."

"But, monsieur," he began, and made a sweeping gesture toward the door as if to suggest the beauties that lay beyond.

"Oh, you're a guide, are you?" I replied. "Nevertheless, I'm not interested in whatever you wish to show me. I've seen pretty much everything about here. Moreover, I have just succeeded in beating the game at the casino. As such, as I buy a post card on which to write of my success, I shall leave Monaco, perhaps forever."

He didn't seem to understand my English, but kept on talking. No longer mind to me, I walked at first, he now became so incoherent that the girl clerk looked

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Make-up for Luncheon and Afternoon Tea

If you have had a strenuous morning on the golf links, in the shops or with the work about your house, save a few minutes for rest and a relaxing beauty treatment before you dress for your afternoon tea or luncheon.

First, your face with your favorite cream, and then lie down with a compress of absorbent cotton soaked in a refreshing lotion over your eyes. There are especially good anti-wrinkle lotions that will absorb all the "tired look" and leave your eyes bright and clear. Some of the best should be applied heated. After a few minutes, remove the compress and pat it all over your face and throat. You can remove the excess with a cleansing tissue and then begin your make-up. This will serve as a powder base for the conservative woman.

Many women like to use a real powder base in order to be sure that their make-up will be enduring. There is a new foundation balm made in a special rachel shade that will harmonize with every shade of skin and powder. These shades are preferred to a white powder base by many women, because they give a much more natural effect for daytime.

An exceptionally good powder base, of this nature, has as one of the important ingredients, the essence of water lily buds, and is the direct outcome of the vogue for dark make-up which started in the fashionable resorts along the Southern coast of France. The vogue has been carried to such extremes that many women use a bronze oil and dark brown powder which gives them a rich, original appearance. I predict that this vogue mark the beginning of the end of pure white powder foundations for daytime use.

It has taught women how much more becoming their make-up can be if they use a tinted base, and I believe that even after the fad for the bronzed make-up has disappeared, the colored powder foundation will remain.

Now you have applied your foundation, work in a little rouge-cream. Powder thoroughly, being sure to include your neck at least an inch or two below the neckline of your dress. The shade of your rouge, powder and lipstick should depend a great deal upon the color of your eyes, and the shade of costume you are wearing.

I always advise women to have two or three shades of rouge, blue, pinkish and tan shades, rouge and lipstick of the red geranium shade is most attractive. If you are the type who ordinarily uses a dark rouge, you can add just a dash of the lighter. For the deep claret and purple shades, the red and blue shades. Blue calls for a clear, fresh-looking skin, so you must be especially careful that your powder and rouge are well-balanced. It is a color that is likely to show up the imperfections of your skin. You can use either the lighter or darker shades of rouge with blue, but you must be sure that you have applied it with the utmost care. Black, of course, is the easiest color for every woman to wear, and it will prove a good setting for your make-up that is becoming to your own type and coloring of hair, eyes and skin.

Even for dress-up occasions in the daytime, I advise a conservative eye make-up. Use a touch of eye shadow cream on the upper lid, as I recommend for street wear, and apply an eyelash grower and darkener to your lashes, rather than mascara. The slight hint of rouge just under the eyebrows may be employed.

Tomorrow I am going to tell you about "Make-up for the Informal Dinner."

Diet and Health

ARE YOU GOING TO DIE FROM HEART DISEASE?

We're all going to die from something, sooner or later, and most of us die from heart disease. If we don't watch our step, it may be sooner. Yes, from heart disease.

Mortality statistics show that the number of deaths from heart disease is distinctly on the increase. In fact, heart disease now leads the list of causes of death in the United States.

I'm going to give you some of the explanations that are given to account for the increased mortality from heart disease, from Dr. Henry Albert, given in the October 15, 1927 Journal of the American Medical Association.

1. Death from heart disease occurs chiefly after the age of 45. Now as there has been an increase in the average length of life, therefore there are more people who live to the "heart disease" age. The reason for 40 per cent of the deaths after 45, from heart disease, is hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis).

2. Decreased numbers of deaths from infectious diseases, especially diphtheria, scarlet fever and tuberculosis.

3. Old age. There are some who ascribe the increase in heart disease to a normal aging process. The cause in this higher age group is chiefly that of hardening of the arteries.

4. Increase in the proportion of the population who have recovered from infectious diseases, but whose hearts have been injured by them. (Acute rheumatic fever causes about 25 per cent of these).

In the discussion of Dr. Albert's paper, Dr. Eugene Ryman Fisk stated that in a study of 1,200 persons who had periodic health examinations, the high blood pressure group showed one outstanding characteristic, that of OVERWEIGHT. (I told you this yesterday, when I wrote on the death of Young Griffie, who weighed 250 pounds). Dr. Fisk then went on to say that Dr. Dublin traced the after history of patients who had scarlet fever, and he did not find any excess death rate from that group.

Now I shall tell you some of the causes of this arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries), which Ham creole makes an entirely different dish than the ham cooked in milk. This tart, spicy sauce, however, may appeal to the family taste.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Creole Ham—Buy a slice of ham about an inch thick. Brown it in a frying pan and then place in a casserole and cover with the following sauce: One-half cup of chili sauce, one-half cup catsup, one tablespoon vinegar, one and one-half teaspoons of flour, one teaspoon sugar and one-half teaspoon dry mustard.

Nut bread—Four cups flour, three-fourths cup sugar, one egg, four tablespoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one cup milk, one cup English walnuts, broken. Bake in a bread pan and let rise one-half hour. Bake three-quarters of an hour.

SUGGESTIONS

Reinforced Socks—One housewife found that her husband wore large holes in the heels of his woolen socks very quickly. To remedy this she took a piece of heavy denim cloth and basted it over the heel of his new socks with strong thread. The socks now last twice as long, and she spends less time darning.

seems to be such a factor in heart disease.

1. Overeating and overdrinking, unbalanced diets (especially diets that are too high in acid ash residue—flesh foods, eggs, cereals and breads).

2. Chronic toxemias (poison), from sources of infections in the body or from outside.

3. Over and under-exercise and overwork.

4. Psychic: Fear, excitement, anger, mental stress, will cause a temporary rise in blood pressure. If indulged in too frequently, there may be a permanent rise. A permanent rise in blood pressure usually results in arteriosclerosis.

Are you interested in lessening the mortality rate from heart disease? All right, work with all your might and main, then, toward the improvement of hygienic habits in yourself and others. A few of the things to take thought of, are a daily exercise period, some time in the open air and sunshine, a balanced diet, sufficient sleep, and the prevention and cure of overweight. You've no doubt noticed that I pay a great deal of attention in the column to overweight. You can see now one of the reasons why I will start you on the road to reducing, from which we are getting the most wonderful reports. Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Senator Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, answered "no" to the roll call one day, on a bill the senators were voting on, and the senate clock stopped.

Maybe it was pure coincidence, but Frank's wellow lawmakers won't admit it. They say the violation of his shout did the business.

From this it may be judged that Frank has a good deal of voice.

He has, indeed, nobody else on Capitol Hill pretends to be able to hold in comparison with him. He owes his prominence—for there's no question that he's a prominent senator—in great part to his vocal equipment. This isn't to imply that he hasn't other qualifications, but that his most noticeable trait is his most immediately noticeable, anyway.

Frank's also a majestic-looking individual.

He's very large and very dignified. In fact, he's senatorial in his appearance. In the cases of some senators, you're surprised, at first, to think that such physical insignificant little fellows have risen to positions of so much importance.

Not so with Frank. You'll pick him out of a crowd as a likely party for high political honors.

Neither is Frank the least bit backward.

When the feeling came over him that he'd make a good Republican presidential candidate, he didn't hesitate a minute about saying so.

He and Senator Curtis, as we're all aware, are the only aspirants in both the two big parties put together who have definitely declared themselves. There are great many others, as we likewise know, who'd accept a nomination if sufficiently urged, but only Curtis and Willis have actually invited the lightning to strike them.

It shouldn't be imagined, however, that Curtis resembles Willis in the least.

Curtis is rather a self-effacing old gentleman.

Of course he was conscious that Kansas were mentioning him as a "favorite son" on the strength of which he admitted, very modestly, that he appreciated the compliment and would greatly like to be his party's standard bearer.

Willis didn't wait for anybody to mention him. He mentioned himself—and in the same tone that he employed to stop the senate clock.

Politicians don't consider his chances particularly bright, but he's attracting a certain amount of attention, nevertheless—simply by talking so loudly and looking so imposing that people can't help hearing him, and, having heard him, giving him a look, which he repays, by looking first class.

He has completely drowned out and outshone Speaker Nick Longworth, for instance, who, hailing from Frank's home state, was regarded a few months ago as quite a little presidential possibility, whereas Frank, at that stage of the game, wasn't supposed to be a possibility at all.

Yes, it would be the surprise of their lives to the politicians if the Republicans should nominate Frank Willis for president, but that doesn't mean that he won't have a lot to say at the election—literally and politically; both.

He'll have a pretty sizeable chunk of votes under his thumb. Though it's most unlikely it will be big enough to win with, it may come in very handy to help somebody else.

Undoubtedly Frank has thought of this himself.

He isn't voice and "front" exclusively. Those merely are his most obvious assets. He's a tolerably smooth political manager, too.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

GOODBYE! PLEASANT DREAMS!

Peter half expected that Screech Owl would wait again at Crow's mentioning his wife, just as he had done before. But this time not a sound came from the direction of the hollow tree. Peter stepped carefully along until he had reached the open doorway of Owl's house, then he bent down and peered in.

It was pitch dark inside and it took him a moment to get used to the blackness, but at last Peter discovered Crow snuggled in a heap with his head tucked under his feathers.

"Goodbye, Screech Owl," said Peter softly. "If you are asleep I do not want to disturb you, but if you are not I want to thank you for coming and talking to me when you did not wish to. And may I come to see you again? What might be most convenient?"

Not a word answered Screech Owl, although Peter repeated his questions twice. Finally the boy turned to speak to Crow and found that bird right at his heels trying to peer into the dusky interior of Owl's house.

"Now isn't that too bad?" asked the boy. "I did wait Screech Owl to know how much I appreciated his being so nice to me. Why, he told me about Owl pellets and everything."

"Did he?" Well I am surprised to hear that," declared Crow. "Generally Owl doesn't say much. In fact I have known him to refuse to speak a word, even when a bird wanted to know something important. Between you and me, I believe that is the reason why he has the reputation of being so wise—because he seldom talks."

"That is what he said himself," declared Peter. "He argued enough with you though! He didn't seem to make any effort to keep his mouth shut this morning."

"Oh, he could not help himself," declared Crow. "Laughing at 'Blue Jays and Crows' always makes him talk. He does not like us a bit. But after all, he's a good chap if you only let him alone; not bad at heart, you know. Only he is the laziest bird I have ever seen. Look at him now. So and so, as sure as you are born. And he went right off into napping while we were talking. Well, pleasant dreams old tuft-head. We don't wish you ill-luck, even if you were not polite enough to stay awake until we had gone."

"And here is hoping that you catch that early worm," laughed Peter, mounting his cold black steed and setting himself firmly upon Crow's back. "I shall come back to see you one of these fine nights, Owl, but I think that I shall wait until it is a bit warmer. I hope that by then you will be in a happier frame of mind, having found your lady love. Now then, Crow, I am ready. Do you mind if I tuck my fingers in under the feathers about your neck? They seem thickest there, and my hands are almost frozen. I forgot to wear my mittens."

"Go as far as you like," declared Crow, slantly. "I believe that you will find that the warmest spot. My coat is nothing new like it is when I am well fed. There is no bird of them all who is more sleek than I am in the warm weather. One, two, three; off we go."

GO AS FAR AS YOU LIKE! DECLARED CROW SLANTLY.

WILMINGTON BEATS ANTIOCH DIVISION B COURT TOSSERS

Using second string players a major part of the contest, the Wilmington College "Green Tornado" took things rather easier than the score indicates in defeating the Division "B" team of Antioch College 43 to 35 in a basketball game on the Quaker floor Thursday night.

Wilmington led at the halftime 17 to 10 and was never in any particular serious danger of being overtaken.

The defeat brings the record of Division B's team to below the .500 percentage mark. Two games have been lost against one victory. Antioch has lost to Dayton University and Wilmington College while recording a neat win over Capital University of Columbus.

Antioch will meet a team nearer its own class Wednesday night, January 25, playing its foremost rival, Cedarville College, at Yellow Springs. Cedarville walloped Division "A" quintet of Antioch earlier in the season and the Division "A" team hopes to avenge this reverse.

BOWLING

After dropping the opening encounter by a bare six pins, the league-leading Downton Country Club bowling team came back to top the two remaining contests and win two out of three games for the rejuvenated Red Wing Co. quintet in a City League match Thursday night. J. Purdon topped the winners with a series of 536 followed by Gannon for the Red Wings with one pin less for the three games. Box score:

Annoying Night Coughs

Stopped Almost Instantly. Very frequently adults and children, especially children, have spells of night coughing due to bronchial irritations or while suffering from colds. These coughing spells, if not quickly checked, are very injurious to the health.

A famous physician's prescription called Thoxine, much better than patent medicines and cough syrups, acts on a different principle, relieves the irritation and stops the cough within 15 minutes or money back. Contains no chloroform, dope or other harmful drugs. Pleasant tasting and safe. 35c, 60c and $1.00. Ask for Thoxine. Sold by Sohn's drug store and all good drug stores. Adv.

GIRL DISAPPEARS; FATHER IS SOUGHT

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 20.—Police here today instituted a nation-wide search for John Lottridge, construction engineer, in connection with the disappearance of his daughter, Ruth, 14, student at Notre Dame Academy, missing since last Tuesday.

The girl lived with her mother, Mrs. Anna Lottridge, who is separated from her husband. Authorities are working on the theory that the daughter was taken by her father, rather than that she was kidnapped by a stranger.

WILMINGTON BEATS ANTIOCH DIVISION B COURT TOSSERS

Using second string players a major part of the contest, the Wilmington College "Green Tornado" took things rather easier than the score indicates in defeating the Division "B" team of Antioch College 43 to 35 in a basketball game on the Quaker floor Thursday night.

Wilmington led at the halftime 17 to 10 and was never in any particular serious danger of being overtaken.

The defeat brings the record of Division B's team to below the 500 percentage mark. Two games have been lost against one victory. Antioch has lost to Dayton University and Wilmington College while recording a neat win over Capital University of Columbus.

Antioch will meet a team nearer its own class Wednesday night, January 25, playing its foremost rival, Cedarville College, at Yellow Springs. Cedarville walloped Division "A" quintet of Antioch earlier in the season and the Division "B" team hopes to avenge this reverse.

BOWLING

After dropping the opening encounter by a bare six pins, the league-leading Downtown Country Club bowling team came back to cop the two remaining contests and win two out of three games for the rejuvenated Red Wing Co. quintet in a City League match Thursday night. J. Purdom topped the winners with a series of 536 followed by Gannon for the Red Wings with one pin less for the three games. Box score:

WILL LAUNCH NEW MOVE FOR CAROL

PARIS, Jan. 20.—A monster popular movement to secure Prince Carol's return to Roumania will be launched at Jassy on January 29. This information was brought to the former Roumanian Crown Prince today by an influential emissary from Bucharest.

According to the courier, the movement will begin with a huge conclave of the peasant party and will be followed by similar meetings in other sections of Roumania.

PITTSBURGH HIT BY HEAVY WIND SQUALL

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 20.—This city checked up today on damage done when a sixty-four-mile gale swept through the downtown district late yesterday, injuring one man seriously and showering homeward bound workers with plate glass fragments. Clifford Kinsell, 29, suffered a fractured skull and his side was punctured by a flying piece of lumber.

SPRING ROUTED

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Chicago's spring-like temperatures of the past week were routed today by a raw northwest wind which threatens to send the mercury down to within a few degrees of zero. At daylight this morning the temperature was ten above. The cold wave rode in on the tail end of a blizzard which struck the city late yesterday.

PLANE IS SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Admiral F. C. Billard, commandant of the coast guard, today instructed Virginia and New Jersey coast guard stations to institute a search for the missing plane, piloted by Ted Mosely, which took off from Daytona for New York Monday with pictures for International News Reel of President Coolidge in Havana.

HEARING DELAYED

Because of a desire for further consideration of the matter, County Commissioners have deferred until January 30 a final hearing on a second petition on file, proposing the widening of the Xenia-Fairfield Pike, I. C. H., No. 25, to the legal width of sixty feet. Final hearing on the proposal had been scheduled for Wednesday.

GIRL DISAPPEARS; FATHER IS SOUGHT

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 20.—Police here today instituted a nation-wide search for John Lottridge, construction engineer, in connection with the disappearance of his daughter, Ruth, 14, student at Notre Dame Academy, missing since last Tuesday.

The girl lived with her mother, Mrs. Anna Lottridge, who is separated from her husband. Authorities are working on the theory that the daughter was taken by her father, rather than that she was kidnapped by a stranger.

SCOUT EXECUTIVE
OUTLINES PLAN FOR FIXING DISTRICT

George F. Miller, New York City, deputy regional Scout executive, outlined a plan to include Xenia in a special southwestern Ohio district to qualify this city for obtaining part-time assistance from a field Scout executive at a meeting at the home of Dr. W. A. Galloway, W. Market St., Thursday night.

Xenia would be placed in a district with four other nearby cities, each of which would derive special benefits from the expert assistance of an executive appointed for the district, if the plan is approved, he pointed out.

Due to adverse weather conditions, the meeting was not well attended and no definite action was taken. Support of citizens of the community is necessary if the proposal is to be carried to a successful conclusion.

Mr. Miller expects to return to Xenia early in February and will again discuss the plan when a larger representation of business men and parents of Scouts is available at a meeting.

Schuyler McClellan was appointed temporary chairman of a committee that will consider the plan.

RUNAWAYS CAUGHT
BY XENIA POLICE

Police are holding two youthful runaways from Richmond, Ind., taken into custody here Thursday night.

The boys gave their names as Leonard Shaffer, 15, and Roy Phillips, 16.

They admitted running away from their homes after school last Saturday and "beating" their way to Huntington, W. Va., where they visited the Shaffer boy's sister-in-law.

Three brothers of the youths started out from Richmond to find the youth fugitives and their auto stalled near Xenia. One of the older brothers, who is employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad, returned to Richmond and police are awaiting the arrival of the other two brothers. Meanwhile Shaffer and Phillips are being detained at Police Headquarters.

FRIDAY FINAL FOR TAXES, DOG TAGS

Friday was the last day for payment of the December installment of taxes and for the purchase of 1923 dog licenses without delinquency.

Tax-payers failing to pay their December installment within the allotted time will automatically be placed on the delinquent list.

A $1 penalty will be added for failure to procure 1923 dog licenses at the county auditor's office within the specified period.

RENT DOG POUND

County Commissioners, in a resolution adopted at their last meeting, reached an agreement with Former County Dog Catcher George Spencer, and his wife, Augusta, for the use of the dog pound on Spencer's property on the Columbus Pike for a rental of $100 during the year 1923, payable quarterly.

The dog pound is used for the incarceration of stray dogs captured by County Dog Warden Alonzo Edwards.

WRIGHT MEMORIAL SITE
Since Congress passed an act for the erection of a memorial in commemoration of the Wright Brothers, the question has arisen as to the location although near Kitty Hawk on the sparsely inhabited North Carolina coast was where their first successful flight was made.

To erect a memorial here would mean it would be lost to the public for Kitty Hawk is still a lonely spot among the sand dunes of Carolina.

Today, in the minds of the public, Simms Station is known as the Wright Bros. experimental field.

The proposed site here is some twenty acres located on the hill overlooking the former Simms Station experimental field which is now a government air field and in

AMBULANCE CHASER
LAWYER TARGET OF BAR ASSOCIATION

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 20.—The old fight of the Ohio State Bar Association against "ambulance chasers" or attorneys who employ runners to solicit personal injury cases for them, is renewed in the report which the committee on judicial administration and legal reform will submit at the annual mid-winter meeting of the association at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel here January 26-28.

A bill, endorsed by this committee, it was said, may be introduced at the next session of the Ohio Legislature seeking to present the maintenance of injured persons by lawyers during the pendency of a claim for injury.

The bill, it was stated, would provide for fines ranging from $100 to $1,000 of persons convicted of violating the contemplated statute. It also would void all contracts between attorney and client wherein the attorney promised to advance money to the client pending the decision of a personal injury case. Exceptions are made in cases where such a contract is entered into the settlement of a bona fide debt.

The mid-winter session, also, will have before it a draft of the proposed bill designed to provide a new inferior court system in Ohio to supplant the justice's courts. A sub-committee, headed by Attorney James A. White, Columbus, is drafting this proposed measure and expects to have the draft completed in time for discussion at the session, it was announced.

City attorneys looked into the case and then advised the director to reinstate the janitor. Today Hanna is busy as ever with his broom and mop.

JUDGE ALLOWS JURY
TRIAL FOR ALLEGED
RECKLESS DRIVER

Probate Judge S. C. Wright has granted an application of Jonas Koogler, Kemp Road, near Dayton, for a jury trial on a charge of reckless driving, in connection with an accident January 11.

The trial is fixed for Friday, January 27.

Koogler is accused of being the "hit-and-run" driver of a milk truck which sideswiped a school bus, forcing it off the road south of Goes Station.

He pleaded not guilty when arraigned and was freed on $200 bond. His hearing had been set for Thursday January 19.

It is charged Koogler failed to stop after the accident. Six of the twenty children being driven to the West Point and Clark's Run schools, sustained minor cuts and bruises when the bus overturned on the Springfield and Xenia traction line after being hit by the milk truck.

The affidavit against Koogler was sworn out by John W. Ray, driver of the bus, who was uninjured. When arrested, Koogler declared he had no knowledge that his truck had sideswiped the school bus.

The condition of Vesper Rosell, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Rosell, Ludlow Road, remains the same late Friday afternoon, according to attaches of McClellan Hospital, where she is suffering from a bullet wound in her head, self-inflicted Monday morning.

The girl's condition gives physicians no hope for her recovery, however.

SCOUT EXECUTIVE OUTLINES PLAN FOR FIXING DISTRICT

George F. Miller, New York City, deputy regional Scout executive, outlined a plan to include Xenia in a special southwestern Ohio district to qualify this city for obtaining part-time assistance from a field Scout executive at a meeting at the home of Dr. W. A. Galloway, W. Market St., Thursday night.

Xenia would be placed in a district with four other nearby cities, each of which would derive special benefits from the expert assistance of an executive appointed for the district, if the plan is approved, he pointed out.

Due to adverse weather conditions, the meeting was not well attended and no definite action was taken. Support of citizens of the community is necessary if the proposal is to be carried to a successful conclusion.

Mr. Miller expects to return to Xenia early in February and will again discuss the plan when a large representation of business men and parents of Scouts is available at a meeting.

Schuyler McClellan was appointed temporary chairman of a committee that will consider the plan.

RUNAWAYS CAUGHT BY XENIA POLICE

Police are holding two youthful runaways from Richmond, Ind., taken into custody here Thursday night.

The boys gave their names as Leonard Shaffer, 15, and Roy Phillips, 16.

They admitted running away from their homes after school last Saturday and "beating" their way to Huntington, W. Va., where they visited the Shaffer boy's sister-in-law.

Three brothers of the youths started out from Richmond to find the youth fugitives and their auto stalled near Xenia. One of the older brothers, who is employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad, returned to Richmond and police are awaiting the arrival of the other two brothers. Meanwhile Shaffer and Phillips are being detained at Police Headquarters.

The dog pound is used for the incarceration of stray dogs captured by County Dog Warden Alonzo Edwards.

WRIGHT MEMORIAL SITE

Editor, The Gazette—
Since Congress passed an act for the erection of a memorial in commemoration of the Wright Brothers, the question has arisen as to the location although near Kitty Hawk on the sparsely inhabited North Carolina coast was where their first successful flight was made.

To erect a memorial here would mean it would be lost to the public for Kitty Hawk is still a lonely spot among the sand dunes of Carolina.

Today, in the minds of the public, Simms Station is known as the Wright Bros. experimental field.

The proposed site here is some twenty acres located on the hill overlooking the former Simms Station experimental field which is now a government air field and in honor of the inventors, named Wright field. In this location thousands of sightseers as well as those engaged in aeronautical activities would be attracted to this historical place.

Also as Dayton is the home of the Wright family and it was there where their first plane was built in their small workshop on the west side, this alone should be sufficient to influence the erection of such a memorial near Dayton. It would be a sad thing to misdirect such an important plan.

AMBULANCE CHASER LAWYER TARGET OF BAR ASSOCIATION

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 20.—The old fight of the Ohio State Bar Association against "ambulance chasers" or attorneys who employ runners to solicit personal injury cases for them, is renewed in the report which the committee on judicial administration and legal reform will submit at the annual mid-winter meeting of the association at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel here January 24-28.

A bill endorsed by this committee, it was said, may be introduced at the next session of the Ohio Legislature seeking to prevent the maintenance of injured persons by lawyers during the pendency of a claim for injury.

The bill, it was stated, would provide for fines ranging from $100 to $1,000 of persons convicted of violating the contemplated statute. It also would void all contracts between attorney and client wherein the attorney promised to advance money to the client pending the decision of a personal injury case. Exceptions are made in cases where such a contract is entered into the settlement of a bona fide debt.

The mid-winter session, also, will have before it a draft of the proposed bill designed to provide a new inferior court system in Ohio to supplant the justice's courts. A sub-committee, headed by Attorney James A. White, Columbus, is drafting this proposed measure and expects to have the draft completed in time for discussion at the session, it was announced.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 20.—When Service Director Walter Steerling "fired" Arthur Hanna, negro janitor at the city building, Hanna filed a court of appeals action for a writ of mandamus, claiming that he was entitled to the job under civil service and couldn't be dismissed. City attorneys looked into the case and then advised the director to reinstate the janitor. Today Hanna is busy as ever with his broom and mop.

JUDGE ALLOWS JURY TRIAL FOR ALLEGED RECKLESS DRIVER

Probate Judge S. C. Wright has granted an application of Jonas Koogler, Kemp Road, near Dayton, for a jury trial on a charge of reckless driving, in connection with an accident January 11.

The trial is fixed for Friday, January 27.

Koogler is accused of being the "hit-and-run" driver of a milk truck which sideswiped a school bus, forcing it off the road south of Goss Station.

He pleaded not guilty when arraigned and was freed on $200 bond. His hearing had been set for Thursday January 19.

It is charged Koogler failed to stop after the accident. Six of the twenty children being driven to the West Point and Clark's Run schools, sustained minor cuts and bruises when the bus overturned on the Springfield and Xenia traction line after being hit by the milk truck.

The affidavit against Koogler was sworn out by John W. Ray, driver of the bus, who was uninjured. When arrested, Koogler declared he had no knowledge that his truck had sideswiped the school bus.

ORPHIUM THEATER, REMODELLED, WILL RE-OPEN SATURDAY

The Orphium Theater, Main and Whiteman Sts., which has been closed for repairs since it was damaged by a $3,000 fire about two weeks ago, will re-open Saturday with a matinee in the afternoon and the customary evening show, according to an announcement by H. L. Binder, owner.

Continuing remodeling work that was in progress when the fire occurred destroying the motion picture projecting machine and eight reels of films, the projecting machine booth has been enlarged so that it extends the entire width of the theater.

Two of the latest Simplex projecting machines have been installed, including new intensifier arc lamp houses. This will enable the theater to provide continuous showing of films, whereas in the past, with only one machine available, an interval was necessary while reels of the film were being changed.

The new booth is entirely fire-proof and constructed of reinforced cement. Its equipment includes a large exhaust fan for purposes of ventilation and to dispose of fumes from the lamp houses.

The ticket booth has been moved out toward the front of the theater, permitting greater seating capacity and more standing room in the rear. The extra space is being utilized by the placing of two rows of ten more seats.

The entire theater has been redecorated, repainted and the screen given a new coat of paint. McCurran Brothers, local contractors, had charge of the work of enlarging the booth and remodeling the front part of the playhouse. The decorating was handled by G. W. Gerhart, this city, while Fred Hornick had the contract for the electrical work.

ALBERT LEA KITCHEN-KOOK THE IDEAL COOK STOVE

Cook With Gas

Kitchenkook brings to rural and suburban homes and city homes outside the gas limits, every convenience of city gas. In fact, it is a gas stove, with its own gas plant built right into it. Makes and burns its own gas from common gasoline, producing the fastest known cooking fire. Kitchenkook is different from any stove you have ever used. It has all the fine features of gas with none of the objectionable features of common liquid fuel stoves; no wicks or chimneys; no smoke soot, or kerosene odor. Takes less than a minute to light; then all burners are ready at once. Turn them on or off as wanted, just like gas. Kitchenkook is the biggest improvement in fine cook stoves in the past quarter century. It's the sensation of the industry. Don't fail to ask for a demonstration of this wonder cook stove. Made in 16 attractive models.

true of the children of miners but of other unemployed in these districts. In the Hocking Valley and Sunday Creek districts in particular, conditions are almost beyond belief, he wrote.

"Children are merely existing, not even sufficient food being available to properly sustain life. National Guard officers detailed as observers in this district report hundreds of cases of children wasting away before their eyes.

"Lack of clothing is equally serious. Large numbers of children are unable to attend school or to leave their homes, not alone because of insufficient clothing to keep them warm but because of actual lack of sufficient clothing to cover them.

"There's a condition for which they are not responsible and which they cannot correct. It, therefore, becomes the duty of all citizens in whom exists the feeling of sympathy for suffering humanity to come to their relief.

Captain Cornwell has nearly completed the appointment of local committees to obtain donations of clothing and shoes for needy children up to the age of sixteen, non-perishable food supplies and donations of cash.

All donations of food and clothing will be assembled at Company L armory and boxed and sent freight collect to the superintendent of the Ohio State Arsenal, Columbus. Clothing and food supplies thus received will be distributed to the points needed from the Ohio State Arsenal. Money received will be deposited in a separate fund in the state treasury and disbursed by the adjutant general for relief purposes.

Organization of local relief work was effected at a meeting at City Hall Thursday night. Lieut. Col. T. E. Andrews, of the O. S. and S. O. Home, and Mayor John W. Prugh will compose the administration committee, the former having charge of donations of clothing and food from the county and Mayor Prugh in charge of the city collection.

The collecting committee is composed of Dr. W. A. Galloway and Scoutmasters R. H. Kingsbury, J. J. Stout and Ernest Blackburn, assisted by all Scouts.

Captain Cornwell heads the receiving and shipping committee, assisted by members of the local guard unit.

A. E. Faulkner is chairman of the financial committee. Other members are R. A. Tull, representing the Rotary Club; Harvey Coates, of the Kiwanis Club, and Morris Sharp, commander of Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion. Representatives are also expected to be appointed from the Moose, Eagles and Elks lodges.

All donations of money should be made in the form of checks, money orders and drafts, made payable to "The Adjutant General of Ohio, Custodian of Children's Relief Fund," and addressed to Chairman Faulkner at the Commercial and Savings Bank.

Members of the publicity committee are: J. P. McLaughlin, of the Gazette; the Rev. W. H. Tilford and the Rev. W. N. Shank, of the Xenia Ministerial Association; County School Superintendent H. C. Aultman, T. H. Zell, Guy Hutslar and a representative of the Xenia city schools yet to be appointed.

Captain Cornwell expected to organize similar local committees in all villages in the county Friday.

INVASION OF HOLLYWOOD ? can this foreign beauty capture U.S. movie fans ?

Lily Damita, most beautiful French screen star, and believed by many to be the prettiest woman in France, is getting ready to go to Hollywood. She is a gifted histrionic star and had turned down more American movie offers than any other screen performer in Europe. However, she has finally capitulated and will sail for the United States soon.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDA H. McGLONE GIBSON
A PERSON'S GAME

Does a person really know what he wants in this world? Does the man who is always talking of a quiet, contented life really want it or would the busy, restless man be happy to sit down by the side of the road and watch the world go by?

"The other evening a man, who in the last two years has grabbed success by the tail and swung it about his head where all might see, was moved to confess that he didn't get as much fun out of it as he expected.

"The trouble is," he said, rather ruefully, "I can't let go. I used to think that if I could put my plans really thought, however, that I would, after getting a certain competency, settle down and enjoy myself with other things. With the first fruits of my success I bought my old friends. I have thought so much along one line, I have become so interested in my own affairs that I am not able to take interest in the things that pertain to them.

Memo: "Is it worth it? I don't know."

true of the children of miners but of other unemployed in these districts. In the Hocking Valley and Sunday Creek districts in particular, conditions are almost beyond belief, he wrote.

"Children are merely existing, not even sufficient food being available to properly sustain life. National Guard officers detailed as observers in this district report hundreds of cases of children wasting away before their eyes.

"Lack of clothing is equally serious. Large numbers of children are unable to attend school or to leave their homes, not alone because of insufficient clothing to keep them warm but because of actual lack of sufficient clothing to cover them.

"There is a condition for which they are not responsible and which they cannot correct. It, therefore, becomes the duty of all citizens in whom exists the feeling of sympathy for suffering humanity to come to their relief."

Captain Cornwell has nearly completed the appointment of local committees to obtain donations of clothing and shoes for needy children up to the age of sixteen, non-perishable food supplies and donations of cash.

All donations of food and clothing will be assembled at Company L armory and boxed and sent freight collect to the superintendent of the Ohio State Arsenal, Columbus. Clothing and food supplies thus received will be distributed to the points needed from the Ohio State Arsenal. Money received will be deposited in a separate fund in the state treasury and disbursed by the adjutant general for relief purposes.

Organization of local relief workers was effected at a meeting at City Hall Thursday night.

Lieut. Col. T. E. Andrews, of the O. S. and S. O. Home, and Mayor John W. Prugh will compose the administration committee, the former having charge of donations of clothing and food from the county and Mayor Prugh in charge of the city collection.

The collecting committee is composed of Dr. W. A. Galloway and Scoutmasters R. H. Kingsbury, J. J. Stout and Ernest Blackburn, assisted by all Scouts.

Captain Cornwell heads the receiving and shipping committee, assisted by members of the local guard unit.

A. E. Faulkner is chairman of the financial committee. Other members are R. A. Tull, representing the Rotary Club; Harvey Cones, of the Kiwanis Club, and Morris Sharp, commander of Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion. Representatives are also expected to be appointed from the Moose, Eagles and Elks lodges.

All donations of money should be made in the form of checks, money orders and drafts, made payable to "The Adjutant General of Ohio, Custodian of Children's Relief Fund," and addressed to Chairman Faulkner at the Commercial and Savings Bank.

Members of the publicity committee are: J. P. McLaughlin, of the Gazette; the Rev. W. H. Telford and the Rev. W. N. Shank, of the Xenia Ministerial Association; County School Superintendent H. C. Aultman, T. H. Zell, Guy Huttar and a representative of the Xenia city schools yet to be appointed.

Captain Cornwell expected to organize similar local committees in all villages in the county Friday.

INVASION OF HOLLYWOOD

? can this foreign beauty capture U.S. movie fans ?

Lily Damita, most beautiful French screen star, and believed by many to be the prettiest woman in France, is getting ready to go to Hollywood. She is a gifted histrionic star and had turned down more American movie offers than any other screen performer in Europe. However, she has finally capitulated and will sail for the United States soon.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON
LIFE'S GAME

Does a person really know what he wants in this world? Does the man who is always talking of a quiet, contented life really want it or would the busy, restless man be happy to sit down by the side of the road and watch the world go by?

The other evening a man, who in the last two years has grabbed success by the tail and swung it about his head where all might see, was moved to confess that he didn't get as much fun out of it as he expected.

"The trouble is," he said, rather ruefully, "I can't let go. I used to think that if I could put my plans into practice I would be happy. I really thought, however, that I would, after getting a certain competency, settle down and enjoy myself with other things. With the first fruits of my success I bought this home, I indulged my luxury-loving soul with three motors, my servants are careful to make me comfortable as possible, my children are cared for by tutors and governesses and my wife has an unlimited charge account both at the dry goods and jewelry stores.

"And yet—there is always an 'and yet' to it, isn't there?—I know that I look five years older than I did two years ago, and I feel ten years older. I haven't time to really enjoy all these luxuries with which I have surrounded myself. I must keep going on. It is a sad thing to confess, but I cannot even enjoy the company and companionship of my old friends. I have thought so much along one line, I have become so interested in my own affairs that I am not able to take interest in the things that pertain to them.

BRINGING UP FATHER

The Theater

Though it was bound to happen sooner or later, Broadway appeared surprised when Hungary's leading playwright, Ferenc Molnar, signed to do some pieces for the movies. Molnar was one of the big boys of "Chu-Chin-Chow" and "Aphrodite." He also acted as sponsor in America of Max Reinhardt, the Moscow Art theater and the late Eleanora Duse.

Maurice Murphy, the little boy who did so well in "Sorrell and Son," has been given a part in Lon Chaney's "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

Freddie Frederick, a Los Angeles five-year-old, is another lucky kid, he has been given a role in Norma Shearer's next.

Twenty Years '08- Ago -'28

The Jamestown post office, which was entered by cracksmen several weeks ago, was again visited by burglars, who, however, were frightened away before gaining entrance.

Supervisors on this division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, were notified of another cut of thirty men which will affect twelve Xenia employees.

Dr. B. R. McClellan, who is a former state president, and Dr. Espy, Clifton, went to Columbus to attend the annual meeting of the state medical council.

Mr. Thurman Early, of S. Detroit St., left for a trip through Oklahoma and Texas.

Though it was bound to happen sooner or later, Broadway appeared surprised when Hungary's leading playwright, Ferenc Molnar, signed to do some pieces for the movies.

Molnar was one of the big boys of the stage business regarded as its very own. But the power of Hollywood seems almost omnipotent. The film folk have the money, and not until the millennium comes will the dollar cease to have the last word, even in art. Molnar's prize pieces for the speaking included "The Guardsman" and "The Play's the Thing." He is at present in New York and we have it on pretty fair authority that he will start right in to work on an opus

CHAPTER LXXVII

Staley shut her a disgusted look. His lips curled back scornfully, under his little mustache that always made Lily think of Prince Danilo's mustache in "The Merry Widow."

"You'll never marry anybody!" he scoffed. "What's the point in telling me any more tales like that, Lily? You know dogged well that you're going to walk straight out of this house and back to that cab driver!"

"I'm not!" She denied it furiously. "I'm going back to the house, but only because I've promised myself to stay there until Pat's better—and he's really better now. I'll probably leave tomorrow, as a matter of fact."

Staley said nothing but just stood with his hands in his well-tanned pockets, watching her with haggard eyes.

"And where are you going when you leave there? Back to your father's house?" he asked. And suddenly he took his hand out of his pockets and came a step nearer her. He put his arms around her. "Don't be a fool, Lily. You can't go back there and live with your people. There's nothing for you there. You'd better come down to earth and tell me you're going to marry me as soon as you're free. Why, you belong in this house!"

He stopped abruptly as she pushed him away from her. "No use talking to me," she said. "I know what I'm going to do. I'm going to be of some use in the world to somebody. Either I'm going to keep house for Dad or Mother, or I'm going to get a job."

She appealed to him. "Can't you see how useless I've always been?" she asked him. "I've been worse than useless. I've led you from the time I first knew you, and I've been dishonest with lots of other people. I've been lazy and good for nothing. You ought to know what they think of me down in Pat's neighborhood. There's a terrible girl there named Frazier—a blonde, who is just as hard-boiled as anything, and they class me with her! They're right, too."

Staley gave a bark of laughter. "Well, I'm glad to know what you like at last," he said. "Evidently the way to make a ten-strike with you is to treat you badly and tell you how tough you are! It's too bad I didn't find that out long ago. They work you, too, don't they? You never had hands like those before."

"Oh, yes I did—when I was keeping house," Lily reminded him. "However, I don't like to be badly treated, Staley. I hate it. You see, none of the France family, except Pat's sister, Florence, wanted me there during all this illness. And they haven't been nice to me. They realized that I wasn't going to leave while Pat was in danger, so they made the best of it. But no one could say they were nice to me, and no one could say I enjoyed it, either."

Staley did not walk with her to the door when she started away a moment later. He stood in the middle of his beautiful and expensive room and watched her from under scowling brows.

"I don't get all this," his voice came to her, as she stood on the threshold. "But somehow or other, you certainly have made a fool of me, as I never thought any woman could." There was bitterness in every syllable.

Lily did not look back at him, but she threw him one sentence over her shoulder. "I'm sorry—and if it's any comfort to you, I've made a bigger fool of myself."

She knew that she had. She had bungled everything for a year and more than a year.

She could look back upon it all now and see just where she had made her first mistake. When she had decided to marry Staley Drummond's money.

Nothing had been right since. Nothing. Her love of money had made all of her unhappiness. She could see it now with great clearness.

Money wasn't so greatly to be wished for, after all, then, was it? It was a convenient and wonderful thing to have, of course. But it couldn't buy anything really worth while—health or friendship or happiness or love.

"Love," thought Lily, and that brought her back to Pat.

If she left the brown-shuttered house tomorrow, she probably never would see him again, except by accident. He wouldn't contest the divorce suit that she had begun—and said that she would go to court and be told that she was no longer the wife of Patrick France, but plain Lily Lexington again.

around the brown-shuttered house and the street where it stood.

"It is an interesting place, too," The thought came to Lily the next morning while she was packing to go home.

Now that she was leaving the little place, she realized how full a life the people in the brown-shuttered house lived. By comparison, the house on Montpelier road seemed very dull, indeed, as she looked forward to endless months and years spent in it.

"Elizabeth!" Pat's voice broke in upon her thoughts. "Elizabeth! I've dropped my pencil and my paper—Elizabeth!"

There was dead silence in the house for a minute while he waited for her to answer him, and while Lily wondered where she could have gone.

"Elizabeth!" he called, and then there was a sound of his bedsprings creaking, as he moved. Lily heard him make a third sound in his throat and then he said something under his breath.

"He knows he mustn't get out of bed," she thought. But evidently that was what he was getting ready to do—and he simply must not do it! The doctor had explained to all of them how important it was that he should not get out of bed for at least another week.

A second later Lily stood in the doorway. Pat had been drawing something on a large piece of paper fastened to his mother's bread board by glass tacks, and the board had slipped to the floor, taking paper and pencils with it. He was drawing his bathrobe on as if he were intending to get out of bed.

"Where do you think you're going?" Lily asked him, as he pulled himself up against the pillows.

He turned his head and, without a word, looked up at her with unbelieving eyes. He did not seem to be able to realize that she was there. He opened his lips as if he were going to say something, and then closed them again. His white face went a shade whiter.

"It's all right, Pat. It's just me," said Lily, without expression in her voice, and with a fine disregard for perfect English.

She came further into the room and picked up the breadboard, the pencils, and the sheet of drawing paper. Her eyes circled in the familiar lines and circles that he had been drawing upon it.

"Another piston ring?" she asked, laying the board down upon his knees.

"Yeah," said Pat. "This one is going to be a cracker-jack, though." He spoke in an ordinary tone, but his eyes never moved from her face as she came up to him and then backed away. She saw him swallow hard once or twice.

"What are you doing here?" he asked after a minute.

Lily shrugged her shoulders as if it were the most ordinary thing imaginable for her to be here in the house of her enemies. "Oh, I've been here a long time," she said, airily. "Ever since you were taken sick, in fact. I've been helping Elizabeth take care of you. She's a wonderful nurse, Pat, and an awfully nice girl. I'm sorry for all the nasty things I used to say about her."

She choked up and couldn't finish the sentence.

"Well, how did you happen to come down here, though?" Pat wanted to know, still looking at her as if he couldn't believe his eyes.

Once more Lily shrugged. "I knew you were sick"—she managed to blurt out, and then she went down on her knees beside the bed, and began to cry.

"Oh, you've been so sick—I thought you were going to die!" she sobbed, forgetting that Elizabeth Eriz always said that cheerfulness was the first rule of the sickroom.

She felt Pat's thin, fine hand on her hair. "Don't cry," he said. "I promise not to die—"

Without her telling him anything more than she had, he seemed to understand just what had happened.

"You like me after all, don't you, you gold-digger?" he said, trying to be casual and light about it.

"Hold up your face so that I can see you. You do like me after all, don't you? Answer me!"

"Don't look at me," Lily begged. "I've been dusting and cleaning—and I'm so dirty—"

Pat tilted her face up to him. "You DO look dirty," he said. "And there are a lot of other things about you that some people might not like. But I like you, anyway."

And he kissed her. "Just let me catch you running around with Staley Drummond again, though," he said, presently. "You were a bad wife, and if I had any brains I wouldn't take you back. I'd make you get your divorce and then you'd marry him and his money."

She shook her head. "Not me," she said. "Really, I hate money lately—now that I've seen how terrible it can be when you like it too well—"

"Don't talk about it," Pat answered. "You'll like it plenty when I make a lot of it for you with a new million-dollar piston ring—mine, won't you? You'll like it—fine!" And he kissed her between each word to show her that he meant exactly what he said.

"Love," thought Lily, and that brought her back to Pat. If she left the brown-shuttered house tomorrow, she probably never would see him again, except by accident. He wouldn't contest the divorce suit that she had begun—and some day she would go to court and be told that she was no longer the wife of Patrick France, but plain Lily Lexington again.

The street was in darkness when she turned into it, driving the dusty, rain-spotted car, and as she turned in at the driveway of the brown-shuttered house she saw that there was a bright light burning in Pat's room.

"He's worse!" she thought, with a painful twist of her heart, and as she jumped out of the automobile and ran across the porch it seemed as if she had known for a long time that Pat was going to die. There was no surprise in her mind just terror and grief.

Sobbing, she threw open the front door and rushed up the stairs. "This is the end of the world for me!" she thought, wildly. "If he's dead—"

At the top of the stairs Elizabeth Ertz met her. She was as calm-browed as usual, and in her hands she held the tea tray upon which Pat had his meals.

"What's the matter?" she asked, softly, and as she spoke Pat's voice came from the bedroom behind her.

"I'd like the short pants of tonight's paper, Elizabeth," he called. Oh, he was all right then! He wasn't dead or dying. The relief in Lily's heart was so great that it was almost joy.

She collapsed on the top step of the stairs, and began to cry frantically, while Elizabeth Ertz stood over her and begged her to be sensible. In a whisper they were not letting Pat know that she was in the house.

"You're going to say good-bye to him, aren't you, for Mrs. France's sake?" Florence asked that night, when they were all at supper in the neat, cozy dining room.

Lily, shaking her head, thanked her lucky stars that she would not have to eat another meal in that house, where she knew she wasn't wanted and wasn't liked.

She could feel Mrs. France's eyes on her as she answered. "No, there's no reason why I should even let him know I was here," she said, simply. "I came because I couldn't stay away—and there's no use in my denying it. But that's all."
